The assets of an estate shall be distributed among the beneficiaries in accordance with their interests except that a testamentary disposition of property as provided in section 17.40 may be substituted for a testamentary disposition. Thus, under section 437.060, second par., as amended in 1994, any property given a decedent “immediately before the death of the testator” passes to the beneficiary “in accordance with the testator’s intentions.” All property remaining in decedent’s estate on the date of death passes to his personal representative or, if a personal representative is appointed, to the personal representative for the purpose of administration and distribution. Under this statute, the personal representative of the estate administers and distributes the remaining estate in accordance with the testator’s instructions, unless the
