Excel to Vcard Converter is a lightweight application that can help you perform this process in a few easy steps. However, it features a very outdated user interface. Straightforward utility that gets the job done The program is relatively easy to use, even if you have never created vCard files before. The conversion process is fairly self-explanatory, but it would still have been great is a user manual were included. While drag and drop actions are not supported, loading a single XLS or XLSX file should be simple enough. Finally, you need to define the output path and map the Excel columns to various vCard attributes. Associate data fields and export your file Before you can create a VCF file you need to go through the fairly straightforward process of mapping the input and output columns. To do so, you only need to specify which column in the Excel spreadsheet should be associated with a certain vCard attribute. Finally, you can export the newly created VCF files to a specified location and use them as you see fit. Comes with a very outdated user interface Excel to Vcard Converter can certainly do the job it was designed for, but looks are also important to many users, and this is where the application falls short. The UI is noticeably out of date, and the main window cannot be resized or minimized. Excel to Vcard Converter is a simple and easy-to-use Vcard converter software. it will convert a sheet or multiple sheets in a spreadsheet into vCard format. You can export the created file to other formats like PDF and XLSX. In the new world, everybody now knows about the vCard format, but did you know that it can be used to export data from one format to another? Every IT pros knows how many complications can arise if you try to export data from one application to another. You might have used the vCard format in the past, but you might have forgotten the necessary steps to format this data the right way. So let's see how it works: Import an Excel spreadsheet to vCard converter. After you have imported the Excel file into the program, the program will ask you if you wish to open a new tab or import the file at once. Choose the import option and you can import the files from any location in your computer. Open the imported file. After importing the files, you will be able to see the layout of your data in the same way you did in Excel. Select the necessary columns. Now you will be able to choose from the available fields to format. You can choose the necessary columns to export. Select the option "Export to vCard". Now choose the location and file name where you wish to save the file. You can easily access your newly created vCard file by typing the file name into your browser. Please note that you will only be able to open the vCard file. Your feedback is very much appreciated. If you need to convert a format like XLS to PDF you can try our XLS to PDF converter which is on this site. It's been over a year since I've posted here, so I figured I'd take a minute and point everyone to my website. I just started a new job in Information Systems and I'm building up a pretty strong team. I'd like to see if I can help anyone out as they're starting their new career, and get a little bit of business out of it as well. I'm in the process of building a new website and will make it the main focus. All you have to do is click on the banner for more information. I'm still at a learning stage and would like to hear everyone's experiences and thoughts on what I should include on the site. Also, if anyone has any suggestions, please let me know. I'm an IT professional and have a pretty strong grasp on this stuff, but I've never done marketing for my website before, so I'm still learning a lot of things. Haha, one of the reasons I left the IT industry was the low pay. I'm really glad to see that you're doing well! Having said that, there are
