PowerSched is a utility that schedules Shutdown, Hibernate and Logoff operations in a relatively easy way. It saves the date in the registry and schedules Shutdown, Hibernate and Logoff to the specified date. You can also schedule Power Off, Suspend and Standby operations if you have the right hardware/software and the right skills. The program starts automatically when the computer boots up and shuts down, or can be scheduled to start on a specified date and time or time period. You can also manually schedule shutdown operations on demand. The main window has a settings box where you can specify the date on which the operation should be executed and the time. By clicking the Start button you can start scheduling operations immediately. The program sends an error report to your computer manufacturer if the operation was not successful. However, some extensions have been added in the latest version. You can set a shutdown time and click a button to start the shutdown operation, if you have a computer with a Win7 operating system, for example. The program is optimized for computers with Intel x86-compatible processors.
