We build every photo and video feature in Lightroom with two principles in mind: simple functionality and powerful performance. Regardless of how complex the features, performance issues with a software tool turns away customers. In Lightroom 4, we introduced smart previews to give you an immediate sense of what your photo will look like when you open it in Photoshop. In Lightroom 5, we've accelerated previews by 90 percent in some cases, which give you faster access to the work and influence more complete interactions with the images. This release also includes the new internal database which optimizes performance for images loaded in the catalog and in-place edits. This all comes with no performance impact on your edited images. I advise you to create test images and do some experimentation to make sure you don't notice any stutter or lag under any workload. In fact, we've tuned the code to avoid the performance issues if your catalog is small, and also there is a Remote Access for Mobile option that allows you to access all features on your Mac while using your iPad or iPhone with one-touch access to your catalog. Lightroom provides tools and a flexible workflow that work seamlessly together, allowing you to easily organize and improve your images. In addition to an All-New Library, Album, and Grid view; there is also a brand new, powerful Details panel for convenient organization of your image data and instant access to the most important information. Most of the features in this release are similar to those available in previous versions, but we've also introduced some exciting enhancements.
